AT HOME A WOMAN SHINES.

"Nay, tempt not thy breast with a prospect of fame:
'Tis a shadow, a meteor, a fine sounding name;
Its joys, like all others, but live for a time;
Besides, home is a place for woman to shine.

Yes, home is her sphere. Does she dazzle elsewhere;
Her light is but borrowed, her brilliance false glare;
She becomes to all archers a mark and a sign—
'Tis at home, at home only a woman should shine.

Does she snatch at the laurel, she'll find that its fruit,
Resembles what takes on Asphalte's shore root?
All ashes to taste, though appearing so fine.
Home, home is the place where a woman should shine,

* * * * * * *

Then tempt not my breast with a prospect of fame—
Its crown could but rest on a brow flushed by shame;
This only endeavor to cherish be mine,
To strive in my home—as a woman to shine.

Guilt and Folly.

LANCASHIRE WITCHES.

From a Review of Potts's Discovery of Witches in Lancashire, in the Athenæum.

Nine out of ten victims of 1612 were inhabitants of a district which civilization had not approached, and which even at this day it has barely entered, namely, Pendle Forest. Like Sherwood and many other so called forests, it has few trees to show, in justification of its ancient name. "Pendle" is the name of a high hill, on the declivity of which is the district in question, extending some five miles in length, a bleak and dreary waste, where nature has done as little for the mind as for the body. At the period in question two old women were the dread of the forest. They were nearly eighty-years of age, infirm, and wretchedly poor: their names were Elizabeth Southernes and Ann Whittle, better known as Old Demdike and Old Chattox. Of course, they were fond of dominion and jealous of each other:

"In the anxiety which each felt to outvie the other and to secure the greater share of the general custom of a not very extended or lucrative market, each would wish to be represented as more death-dealing, destructive, and powerful than her neighbor; and she who would number up the most goodly assortment of damage done to man and beast, whether real or not was quite immaterial, as long as the draught was spiced and flavored to suit the general taste, stood the best chance of obtaining a monopoly. It is a curious fact, that the son-in-law of one of those individuals, and whose wife was herself executed as a witch, paid to the other a yearly rent, on an express covenant that she should exempt him from her charms and witchcrafts. Where the possession of a commission from the powers of darkness was thus eagerly and ostentatiously paraded, every death, the cause of which was not perfectly obvious, whether it ended in a sudden termination or a slow and gradual decline, would be placed to the general account of one of the two (to use Master Potts's description) 'agents for the devil in those parts' as the party responsible for these unclaimed dividends of mortality."

Probably these crazy old creatures were, to a considerable extent, self-deluded. Firmly believing in the visible communication between mortals and the powers of darkness, they might ascribe the fulfilment of their own charms and conjurations to the agency of familiar spirits, which were said to appear before them at times in the shape of black dogs, cats, &c. An imagination excited like theirs would see such a spirit in every dog or cat that had the misfortune to wear Belzebub's livery. The tales related of both reached the ears of a neighboring justice, Roger Nowell, of Read, who, on the 2d April, 1612, committed Old Demdike, with her daughter Alison Device, (Davis,) old Chattox and her daughter, Anne Redfern, to Lancaster Castle, to take their trial at the next assizes for various witchcrafts and murders produced by witchcraft. They had scarcely been sent away a week, when "the same religious honest gentleman" heard of another occasion in which he could show forth his zeal in "the service of his country." Naturally enough, the children and friends of the incarcerated victims met together to bemoan their common misfortune, and to consider what measures could be adopted for the defence. The place of meeting was at Malking Tower, a solitary building within the forest, and the time Good Friday; presumption strong enough of additional doings in the occult craft. His worship heard, and perhaps believed, that the resolutions adopted on this occasion were truly diabolical, both in nature and extent. Master Cowell, the jailor of Lancaster Castle, was to be slain, before the next assizes, and, what was still more tremendous, that ancient and strong fortress was entirely to be blown up! Enough for Justice Shallow, if, indeed, there was not too much knavery in his proceedings, to merit such a name; for tradition asserts that he had a grudge against one of his new victims, Alice Nutter, a gentlewoman, on account, of a disputed boundary.

Be this as it may, he sent after their four predecessors the said Alice Nutter, Elizabeth Davis and James Davis, (daughter and grandson of Old Demdike,) Catherine Hewitt, Jane and John Bulcock, (Mother and son) and some others with those names, as they had the good fortune to be acquitted, we need not perplex the reader. The principal witness for the "dark doings" at Malking Tower, was Jennet Davis, a child of nine years, daughter of Elizabeth Davis, and grand daughter of Old Demdike, who was thus admitted to swear away the lives of the persons the nearest to her on earth, not of her mother and grandmother only, but of her brother James and her sister Alizon Davis. It is, indeed, true, that her mother, brother, and sister, together with "Old Chattox," confessed in prison the crimes of which they were accused; but the confession had, probably been wrung from them, if not by torture, by means equally reprehensible. The others, namely, Ann Redfern, Alice Nutter, Catherine Hewitt, John and Jane Bulcock, who were convicted on the evidence of the same child, strenuously asserted their innocence to the last, but without advantage to themselves — Old Demdike, who had also confessed, died in prison before the trial.

About twenty years after the trial in question, Pendle Forest became the scene of other witchcrafts, which deserve consideration, since the evidence goes far to account for that offered in similar cases. A boy of Pendle, not more than ten or eleven years of age, gave testimony against at least a score of his neighbors, before a "Richard Shuttleworth and John Starkie, Esqrs." two other sapient Lancashire justices. This urchin swore that on All Saints day preceding, he had gone to gather wild flowers; that, while thus occupied, he suddenly perceived two grey-hounds, a black and a white one, running towards him; that he took the said grey-hounds by the strings fastened to their collars, intending to hunt with them; that soon afterwards a hare rose near them, but neither of the dogs would run; that being angry with them, he tied them to a hedge and beat them both; that, after a few strokes, the black grey-hound was changed into the wife of a neighbor, (Dickenson's wife,) whom he well know, and the other beast into a little boy, whom he did not know; that, in great fear, he was preparing to run away, when 'Dickenson's wife" offered him a piece of money to hold his peace; that, on his refusal to receive it, he changed the little boy who had borne the brown-grey hound's shape, into a white horse.

Then immediately the said Dickenson's wife spoke this informer before her upon the said horse and carried him to a new house called Hoarstones, or ridge almost a quarter of a mile off, whither, when they were comme, there were divers persons about the doore, and hee sawe divers others cominge rideinge upon horses of severall colours towards the said house, which iyed theire horses to a hedge neare to the sed house: and which persons went into the sed house to the number of threescore or thereabouts, as this informer thinketh, where they had a fyer and meate roastinge, and some other meate stirringe in the house, whereofa younge woman who he (this informer) knoweth not, gave him flesh and bread, upon a trencher, and drinke in a glasse, which, after the first taste, hee refused, and would have noe more, and said it was nought.—And presently after, seeing diverse of the compony goinge to a barn neare adjoyneinge, hee followed after, and there hee sowe six of them kneelinge and pullinge at sixe severall roapes which were fastened or tyed to ye toppe of the house; at or which pullinge came then in this informer's sight flesh smoakinge, butter in lumps, and milke as it were syleinge from the said roapes, all which fell into basons whiche were placed under the saide roapes."

The whole deposition is a tissue of like portents. The boy's testimony was supported by the father's, and the two sapient justices committed a considerable number of the accused to Leicester to take their trials. Webster whom we have already mentioned, honourably distinguished himself in the endeavour to expose this infatuation. He happened at the time to be curate of Kildwick. Hearing that the boy was taken from church to church each succeeding Sunday to point out (like Jennet Davis) the persons whom he had seen at the meeting of the witches, (evidence enough to cause the committal and even the judicial condemnation of any one whom he had the wickedness to accuse,) and seeing him brought one Sunday to his own church in the middle of the service, Webster, after the service was ended, went, to the house where the boy was to stay all night. He found the younge rogue accompanied by "two very unlikely persons that did conduct him and manage the business." The curate proceeds:—"I desired to have some discourse with the boy in private, but that titey utterly refused; then, in the presence of a great many people, I took the boy near me and said, 'Good boy, tell me truly and in earnest, didst thou see and hear such strange things of the meeting of witches as is reported by so many that thou didst relate, or did some person teach thee to say such things of thyself?' But the two men not giving the boy time to answer, did pluck him from me, and said he had been examined by two able justices of the peace, and they never did ask him such a question. To which I replied, 'The persons accused had therefore the more wrong.'"—The "two able justices," Master Shuttleworth, of Gawthorp, and his brother, of Huntroyd, ask such a question!

No, no: they were too ambitious of the fame enjoyed by Master Nowell and his colleagues twenty years before, (a fame which Mister Potts had done so much to extend) to adopt such vulgar measures as cross questioning or examining in private, "Curat lex"—receive any deposition!—hang the witches!" was the mode of proceeding. At the ensuing assizes seventeen were found guilty and condemned to death. But, for them, and much to the disappointment of Mister Potts, (if then alive,) the judges respited the prisoners until the pleasure of the King in council should be known.—Charles no less staggered, ordered the Bishop of Chester to investigate the affair: four of the women convicted were sent up to London, and examined by the royal physicians, and next by the monarch himself; the boy and his father were confronted with them both together and seperately: and, finally, the boy confessed that "he was taught and suborned to devise and feign those things against them, and had persevered in wickedness by the council of his father and some others whom envy, revenge, and hope of gain had prompted on to that devilish design and villany." Of course all the prisoners were liberated. "Envy, revenge and hope of gain had easily operated in producing the testimony of Jennet Davis; but there had been wanting a justice, judge and monarch of common sense."

Belzoni.

He was a native of Padua, and educated in order to become a profound monk; but during the frenzy of war, being noticed by the French army, in consequence of his commanding figure, to be admirably well calculated for a figleman, prudently avoided seizure for so deadly a service by getting together what few things time would permit him, and so left Rome. I should have stated to the reader, that, upon his arrival in London, in the year 1803, he walked into Smithfield during the Bartholomew Fair time, when he was seen by the master of a show, who, it is said, thus questioned the Merry Andrew; "Do you see that tall looking fellow in the midst of the crowd? He is looking about him over the people as if he walked on stilts. Go and see if he's worth our money, and ask him if he wants a job."

Away scrambled Mr. Merryman down the monkey's post, and "as quick as lightning," conducted the stranger to his mother, who, being satisfied of his personal attractions immediately engaged, plumed, painted, and put him up. The reader will readily conceive that a man like Belzoni, seriously educated for the duties of the church, and accustomed to associate with people of good manners, could with no little reluctance endure the vulgar society his pecuniary circumstances alone compelled him to associate with. However, after the expiration of some years, in the course of which time he had married an l saved money, he and his wife were enabled to visit Portugal, Spain, and Malta, from which place they embarked for Egypt. Fortunately for Belzoni, the wife he had chosen more than equally shared his numerous dangers, by spiritedly joining in all his enterprises, which some of my readers will recollect are most delightfully described by herself, in what she styles "A Trifling Account," printed at the end of her husband's "Travels in Egypt, Nubia," &c.—A Book for a Rainy Day.

Poverty in England.

In this country we can form but a faint conception of the pauperism in Great Britain. According to a writer in Blackwood's Magazine, the number of paupers is 4,000,000 or one 7th part of the population of the empire. The proportion is as follows: In England 1,500,000; in Ireland 2,300,000; in Scotland 300,000. Since 1215, a period of only thirty years, there has been raised for the relief of the poor in England alone, upwards of 200,000,000, or about one thousand millions of dollars. On the other hand, it has been demonstrated, by the returns of the income tax, that there are seventy thousand persons in the empire whose annual revenue is £200,000,000 or about £2,300 each.

A Fish Story.

A wag went out a fishing one day, and not meeting with the best of luck, determined on having some sport. He went home and deposited what he had caught, and a neighbor passing soon after, and accosted him with—

"What luck to day?"

"Oh" answered the wag, "no great—I caught a hundred or two."

"A hundred or two," replied the neighbor, with great surprise; "I'll bet you a dollar of that!"

"Done," said the wag; whereupon he uncovered a pile near him, and a couple of fish lay there, scarcely through their death struggles, remarking—"There they are—I have won the wager!"

"How so," returned his neighbor, "there are only two?"

"Well," replied the wag, "that's just as I told you—a hundred or two!" That is a fish story.

The Newspaper Press.

There has been a mighty advance of late years in the talent and whole staple of periodical literature.—The very newspapers teem with eloquence of the highest order, inasmuch, that, were one to compile now a volume of extracts under the title of Beauties or Specimens of the British Classics, he need be at no loss to find editorial articles in some of our leading journals which outrival the finest paragraphs of Johnson, or Milton or Addison. They are precisely such effusions as might be expected from the highest minds, lured into the service of great capitalists and proprietors by offers of the highest remuneration; and so, if the subject happen to be one which they have mastered and thoroughly studied in all its bearings, we are presented with compositions which, in respect of matter, are characterized by a deep and sound philosophy, and which, in respect of style, charm and even astonish the reader by the magical powers and combinations of a most fertile phraseology. Even on subjects which they have not studied, but on which they are called to write by the pressing exigencies of the day, if they often fail in apprehending the just and true principles of the question at issue; still, in the course of their rapid and extemporaneous sentences, we are often presented with the impressive plausibilities and salient features of the argument. It is thus that, while powerful organs for giving a right direction to popular and public sentiment, they may be alike powerful in giving currency and diffusion to error and in maintaining, for a time at least, the ascendancy of a mischievous delusion over the understandings of the community at large.—Dr. Chalmers.

☞ We perceive by the London Illustrated News, that Lady Adela Villiers has returned from her runaway trip to Gretna, and has been re-married at St. Pancras Church, London, agreeably to the forms of the Established Church, and with the assent of her parents.

From the Southern Churchman.

THE "OLD CHURCH BELL."

Hark! hark! it is the "old church bell"—
Those sounds I dearly love—
Its soft, melodious voice foretells,
Of endless peace above.

How often in my childhood's days,
I've listened to that bell;
It taught my youthful feet the ways
I loved to tread so well.

Long years! long years! around have roll'd,
And cares have come apace,
Since first I heard that old bell toll'd,
From out that holy place.

E'en now whene'er I hear that sound,
Come merrily o'er the lea,
It seems as if relief I've found,
From earthly misery.

It has a sweet, a joyful sound—
Like music of the spheres—
It makes my rebel heart rebound,
From earth to heavenly cares.

A Rum Case.

On Wednesday morning a red faced, spare man, with a couple of gashes on his nose, short, stiff black hair sticking out all over his head, dressed in a very seedy black coat of fashionable make, and pantaloons that had once been drab colored, but were now badly torn and drabbled with mud—with the remains of straps still adhering fondly to their bottoms and seeming to ask each other if it were possible to meet again—was arraigned before the Recorder upon an affidavit charging him with having beaten a female at the house of his wife, and having maltreated other parties. Recorder Genois mildly said to him—"Warren, you are brought before me again for fighting and for getting drunk, and I shall be again obliged to commit you."

"Well, sir," said Warren, trembling in his brogands from the effects of liquor and cold, "I know it's the same old bad business, sir; it's drink that does it, sir—the drink, the drink. I'm going off Saturday to sea, and perhaps that'll better me."—"You have made that promise and broken it too often," replied the Recorder: "you dislike water too much to keep to it. If you must get drunk, why do you go to your poor wife, who is striving to earn a living, and maltreat her?" "Well, sir," said Warren, looking at the Recorder, with a tear in his eye,—I—I must see my children! But I see it's no use; you've got the affidavits against me, but I must ask a favor of your honor—let it be the parish prison this time, and not the workhouse.—Send me before the Criminal Court, and let me be tried by a jury of my country—and let 'em convict me if they will and I will go to jail but, Mr. Recorder—(and he drew himself up proudly for a moment)—I wasn't born for a workhouse."

The Recorder complied with his wish, and committed him, in default of security, for his appearance at court.

His story is soon told. A rich man's son—gifted with more than ordinary talents—fitted by education to be an ornament to society—the husband of a pretty and amiable wife; all went well for some time; but he took to drink and rapidly descended to his present degraded position. His wife, striving to keep herself and children from starvation, takes in washing and does anything for an honest living; but as often as he can, when influenced by the demon Rum, he makes a descent upon her, and with her scanty means, wrung from her by force, he repairs again to the groggery, and ultimately brings up at the Recorder's office.—*N. The Indian Chief and the Child's Toy.

The simplicity displayed by an aged chief in the matter of a child's toy was most amusing. Having picked up one of those little soldiers stuck on a box with a wire handle, the turning of which causes the arms to rise and fall upon his drum, at the same time that it produces a few hard notes, he turned the wire twice and thrice. Then he regarded the toy with intense earnestness, and again turned. Of course the same sound and movement were repeated. He was growing much astonished. He inspected it with the greatest care and tried again. The results were the same, but he was involved in deeper mystery. He let fall his hands, and, turning his face upwards to the skies in the most thoughtful of attitudes and with a most powerful expression of amazement, continued during the space of at least ten minutes to consider within his own soul the cause of this miraculous effect. But the point was too abstruse for him to solve; and, eventually, he replaced the toy with great care on the spot from which it had been taken, and, without word or sign to the pedlar who solicited him to purchase it, folded his arms, and stalked grandly away to his quarters.—Colonial Magazine.

From an English Magazine,

National Characteristics.

It is not long since we heard a worthy Dutch landscape painter, narrate in broken English the following incidents,

"I vork in my studio one day ven one gentleman wid de lunettes come in, make one, two, tree bow very profound, and say, Gut morgen, Meinheer!' I make one, two, tree, profound bow, and say de same. Den de gentleman look at all my picture very slow and deliberate: Den he say, "Dat is very good; dat is very beautiful; dat is vonderous fine.' Den he say at last, "Sare, will you permit me to bring my friend de Baron von A, to see your fine vork?" I say, "Sare, you will do me one favor." Den he make tree more bow, more profound den before and go vay. De next day he bring his friend de baron, and dey two all make six bow all very profound and dey say dat all is very beautiful, and den de baron say, "Sare will you let me bring my friend de Count von B, to see dese so fine vork?" and den dey make dey bow once again, and go vay, and I see dem no more.—Dat vas one German gentleman.

"Another day, one little gentleman come in wid one skip and say, 'Bon jour, Monsieur! chaime de faire votre connoissance.' He take up his lorgnette, and he look at my first picture, and he say, 'Ah, very vell, sare! dat is one very fine morsel.' Den he pas quick to anoder and he say, Sare, dis is truly admirable; after dis beautiful nature is vort nothing;' and so in two minute and half he get trough dem all. Den he twirl his cane, and stick out his chin, and say, 'Sare, I make you my compliment; you have one great talent for de landscape; I shall have de honor to recommend you to all my friend; au revoir, Monsieur;' but I see him never again. He vas one French Gentleman.

Another day, I hear one loud rap wid one stick at my door, and ven I say, "Come in," one gentleman walk forward, very stiff and nod his head, but never take his hat off. He say, "May I see your picture?" I bow, and say, "Wid pleasure, sare." He no answer, but look at one long time and say not a vord. Den he look at another and say nothing. Den he go to anoder and look, and say, "Vat is de price of this?" I say, "Forty Louis." He say nothing, but go to de next, and look one long time; and at last he say, "Vat is de price of dis?" Den I say, "Sare it is sixty louis." Den he say nothing but look anoder long time.—Den he say, "Can you give me pen and ink?" and ven I give it he sit down and he say, "Vat is your name sare?" Den I give him my card, and he write one order on Torlonia for sixty louis: he give me de order wid his card, and he say, "Dat picture is mine: dat is my address, send it home; good morning." And so he make one more stiff nod and valk away. This was one English gentleman."

How to Make Boots and Shoes.

One hint let me give to all. The secret of a well-fitting shoe, or rather of a good-looking shoe—and it is upon this principle that all French shoemakers proceed, but all English cobblers do not—is, that it should be much longer than the foot itself—at least an inch and a half longer. And for these two reasons: first, that since a squat, broad, dumpy foot is much uglier than a long thin one—therefore you may always diminish the appearance of breadth, by adding the reality of length; and next, that when the shoe is long, the toes have plenty of room, and commonly 'tis here "that the shoe pinches." No one has corns on his heels or on the sides of his feet, let his shoes or boots be as narrow as he can well bear them. If you would cure yourself of the most obdurate corn, or if you would guarantee your children from ever having any, let them, and do yourself, wear French chaussures; or else have the boots, &c., made fitting well to the foot at the side, and with exactly one inch, at least, to spare in length, when standing in them.—English paper.

Daring Highway Robbery.

The inhabitants of Brooklyn, N. Y., says the N. Y. Express, are not safe in the streets of their city after dark, and can only venture forth at the peril of their persons to say the least, while cases of the most brutal personal violence and murder outright have occurred within a short time. On Sunday night a young man who is engaged as a clerk in a grocery store at the corner of ——— and York streets, while on his way home was met at the corner of York and Bridge streets by a couple of villians, who, in the first place commanded him to be silent if he valued his life, and then ordered him to give up his money. He had but fifty cents which he gave them.

He describes the ruffians as being armed with formidable looking clubs which they held threateningly over him as they made their felonious demand. Truly things are at a pretty pass "over there." The truth is, Brooklyn will never be able to maintain order or secure to her citizens the peaceable enjoyment of their rights until she becomes attached to New York, and thus comes under the protection of our Municipal Authorities. This might be done and the dignity of the "State of Long Island" be preserved by Brooklyn having her own corporation, elective by her own citizens, which would afford as perfect a representation as she could desire, in case a complaint should be made

Mrs. Foster.

This lady, formerly Abby Kelley, but now married to Mr. Foster, and extensively known and distinguished as a public lecturer on Anti-Slavery, is now, with her husband, in this city, holding meetings at Temperance Hall. Her husband is the well known author of a certain pamphlet on the subject of the Churches. We understand their lectures will be continued to-day.

Correspondence of the Baltimore American.
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5, 1846.

The movement of Mr. Adams on the Oregon question has had the effect of checking the spirit of business so manifest after Mr. Calhoun's views were made known on the same subject. There are no transactions in flour—holders are asking $5,37½ for standard brands; buyers are offering 110a112 cts. for red wheats but do not meet the views of holders. Some 1,200 bags Laguayra Coffee on landing has been taken on private terms.

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of the United States Bank was held this morning, at which Edmund Pryor, Esq. presided, and Dr. John A. Elkington acted as Secretary. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read, and the President of the Bank presented a report, which was read, accepted and entered on the minutes. A committee of five were appointed for the purpose of ascertaining the facts of the controversy between the Government of the United States and the Bank, and the propriety of memorializing Congress in reference thereto.

Operations at the Stock Board were quite limited, and without material change in prices—$3,500 Pittsburgh 5's sold at 80; $4,000 Reading Rail road bonds at 68; Wilmington Railroad was held at 29½; U. S. Bank 4¼a4¾; Penna. 5's 69a69¼.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce.
WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 31st.

I have seen a letter from a high official source in London, brought by the last steamer to a gentleman in this city, which says, "Unless your President is the most unreasonable man alive, there can be no difficulty about Oregon." The same writer says that the views of the British Government in relation to America are as pacific as can be, and adds that the repeal of their corn laws and food taxes is certain.

I repeat that I have seen and read this letter for myself, and that the official station and high character of the writer gives great weight to what he writes. With a desire to preserve peace on the part of the British Government, and a certainty of a repeal of her corn laws and food taxes, what apology will the Western members give to their constituents for their war speeches!

Beautiful.

The Portuguese give the very poetical name of anjinhos, little angels, to young children when they die; and considering that they are at once translated to heaven, without the unpleasant passage through purgatory, instead of mourning for them, they rejoice, putting on their gayest attire; thus, at their funeral no one appears in black, and the parents are congratulated instead of condoled with. How much more rational are they who thus meet death with smiles, than those who look upon him as the King of Terrors.

A New Feature.

At a recent sitting of the French Academy of Sciences, Dr. Pierquin read a paper in favor of the corset as an article which should be worn by females. He ridiculed medical men for attributing consumption and various other diseases to this cause, and declares that the inferiority of the muscles in that part of the female frame requires the aid of this outer case.

Matrimony.

There age many roads to Matrimony, says the New York Morning News, and some of them exceedingly strange and crooked. A few days ago a young man in Philadelphia, was imprisoned for an alleged assault and battery, on a young lady, to whom he was paying his addresses, and in prison was seized with a severe fit of sickness. The dormant spark of affection was aroused in the complainant on hearing of his illness, and induced her to withdraw the charge, when the young man was restored to liberty. He, determined not to be outdone in generosity, intimated his desire to be united in the bonds of matrimony with his fair accused, and she being nothing loath, the pair were duly made one by the Alderman.

The Divorce of Ex-Governor Thomas and his Wife.

The Richmond Compiler gives the following report in the Legislature of that State, on the bill "divorcing Sarah C. P. Thomas from that of her husband, Francis Thomas, and changing the name of said Sarah C. P. Thomas to Sarah C. P. McDowell."

Mr. Lee expressed a hope that the House would consent to suspend the rules, that this bill might be carried immediately through its several stages; that this House, as far as it was in its power, might aid in redressing the wrongs of this much injured lady. He therefore moved that the rule which prohibits a bill from being read more than once in one day, be suspended for this purpose.

Mr. Stovall thought there was no earthly necessity for this haste. The bill would come up in its proper order, and be passed with all necessary expedition.

The motion to suspend the rules prevailed without a division.

The bill being read a second time, Mr. John H. Curtis arose to explain what might seem to be an inconsistency in his conduct, as it was known he was generally opposed to the interference by the Legislature with the delicate relations of man and wife. He was satisfied, however, that it was highly proper to grant the prayer of the petitioner in this case. He attended the examination of certain witnesses in this case, when it was before the court a few days since, and was surprised, but much more delighted that certain grave charges brought against the petitioner were there routed. Routed did he say? They were scattered—scattered like mist before the rising day! He would always give his feeble aid in support of female character and female virtue, and would therefore with great pleasure vote for this bill.

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed, and being engrossed, was finally passed without a dissenting voice.

Qualifications of an Editor.

He must possess the constitution of a horse, obstinacy of a mule, independence of a wood-sawyer, endurance of a starving anaconda, impudence of a beggar, spunk of a chicken cock, pertinacity of a dun, and entire resignation to the most confounded of all earthly tread-mills.

Injury to a Vessel by a Sword Fish.

The barque Tobey, of Boston, has been reported as having put into Mozambique, on account of having been damed by a sword fish. Capt. Bates of the brig Richmond, states that the Tobey was detained in port three weeks, to discharge her cargo and repair the damage; and that the leak occasioned by the thrust of the sword fish was at least 1200 strokes an hour.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.
WASHINGTON, Dec., 31st, (Wednesday,) 4½ o'clock, P. M.

One of the Senators from Maryland received a letter, I learn, from Mr. McLane, by the last packet, in which Mr. McLane says that Lord Aberdeen has assured him that the British Government were ready and willing to compromise on the basis of the 49th parallel, and that the rejection of that offer by Mr. Pakenham was, in his, Lord A's., opinion, ill-advised, and unexpected. Farther, Mr. McLane says that, if the negociation had been entrusted to him, he would before this time have brought it to a satisfactory conclusion. This view is confirmed by other letters, and particularly by one from Joshua Bates.

Association of Ideas.

A Stag [a railway speculator] dining near Capel Court, made a strange mistake the other day, which only proves that whatever is uppermost in the mind is sure to come out. He wanted some potatoes; but unwittingly cried out, "Here, Mary, bring me a plate of mashed railways."—Punch.

☞ The jury in the case of Virgil Knapp, on trial in New York, for causing the death of Sarah Decker, by administering oil of tansey, to procure an abortion, have returned a verdict of "not guilty."

☞ The exact amount of the Boston city debt, on the 1st of January, 1846, was 1,952,350.

☞ The Boston Sun of Friday says:—We learn that the Rockaway House, at Phillips Beach, was destroyed by fire last night, about 11 o'clock—nothing lost.

☞ John Towell, a Philadelphia constable, has been bound over for trial on a charge of permitting the escape of the notorious Bill Wood, a couple of weeks since.

☞ A very unfortunate Recontre took place on the 23d ult., at Bayou, Sara, La., between Capt. Scott, of the steamboat Belle Creole, and Capt. Dimitry, formerly commanding her. It appears these gentlemen had an altercation, which ended in blows, during which Capt. D. drew a dirk knife and stabbed Capt. S. in the abdomen. The wound is a very serious one.

☞ The New York Court of Errors, by a very decided vote, have sustained the constitutionality of the General Banking Law. The point was decided in the case of the Farmers' Bank of Hudson vs. Herman Livingston, which involved the constitutionality of the General Banking Law.—The Court, by a vote of 15 to 7, reversed the decision of the Supreme Court, and thus sustained the constitutionality of the law.

☞ We learn from the Colonization Journal, that Judge Leigh, the executor of John Randolph, has, purchased a large tract of land in Mercer county, Ohio, on which to locate the slaves, some 300 manumitted by that remarkable man. A large quantity of land in Mercer county, comprising three or four townships, is now owned nearly altogether by colored persons.

☞ The Lonisville Journal publishes a letter from a Kentucky gentleman, in relation to the introduction of slave labor into manufacturing pursuits at the South. The writer thinks that the difference in expense would be about $73 per year in favor of slave labor.

☞ A large quantity of spurious American coin is in circulation in Lynn, Lowell, Newburyport and other small places in Massachusetts.—Pittsburgh Journal.

Small places, hey! Do you call your city small? Lowell is as large, perhaps larger than Pittsburgh, Lynn has 11,000, and Newburyport some 5000 or 9000 inhabitants.—Boston Whig.

"They Say." 'They say———,' said Kerchberg.

'It is not true!' exclaimed Faustina.

'What is not true, Countess?' asked he in amazement.

'Whatever begins with they say, is on the face of it not true.'

☞ The Counting House Almanac, &c., of the Commercial Journal, published on the 1st of January, professes to give the Banks, Insurance Offices, and Brokers of the city, but leaves out designedly, no doubt, the oldest Brokers in the city, N. Holmes & Son. Mr. Holmes has been in business on Market street, since 1809, and, with one exception has been doing business on that street longer than any other individual,—and is still prepared to receive his friends with his accustomed promptness and correct business habits. As that paper seems to have a sort of mania as regards every thing concerning the Gazette, it may be because our Exchange List is corrected by N. Holmes & Son, that their names were left out of the list of Brokers.—Gazette of Wednesday.

It is merely necessary to state a fact, in order to show that the whole of the above most diabolical conspiracy exists only in the maddened brain of the man that swapped conscience for the Gazette

The carrier of the Journal made up his own New Year's token, and had it printed at his own cost, and did not even favor the Journal Job Office with the job. Our first knowledge of the fact, that Mr. Holmes' card was omitted, was had from a glance at the copy presented to us by the Carrier. When we remarked the omission, which we did instantly, he said, "he gave the cards of those brokers only, who patronized him."

That the Editor of the Gazette should readily assign to us the contemptible motive we find in his paragraph, we cannot marvel at, since he is capable of almost any meanness himself, but that Mr. Holmes should think as that man does, would both surprise and mortify us. He will perceive that he has done us injustice, and that is all we desire.

The Mysterious Female at the Tombs.

This young lady who has so long refused to give her name or connections, (says the New York News of the 15th inst.,) and has several times attempted suicide, it seems was brought to this city some time ago, by an individual who represented her as his wife, and placed her in a respectable boarding house, from whence, at his instance, she found her way to a house of infamous notoriety, in Thomas street. Being disgusted by the habits of the inmates, deserted by her protector, and exceedingly desponding, she sought in an evil hour to fly from the accumulated wretchedness of her situation, by a fearful plunge into the untired future. We understand that under the care of the excellent matron of the city prison, her mind is gradually recovering its tone; and that although stricken and bowed down by the heartless conduct of him, for whom she sacrificed her own peace, and the opinions of her friends, yet there are hopes that with judicious forbearance, she may yet regain some portion of that character which is woman's only trust and safeguard from contumely and neglect. We forbear giving her name or any other circumstances connected with her, from motives that may be easily appreciated.

The Army.

A plan, we hear, (says the Bath Journal,) is under consideration by the Government, which if carried into effect will be likely to produce a constant supply of good soldiers to fill up the vacancies that are constantly occurring in the army. The militia are to have a most efficient staff in each county; one third of the main body of the militia to be embodied for three years exercise, at the same time allowing the men to volunteer to the line, with certain regulations to subaltern officers to extend their services also. This will put a stop to the demoralizing scenes that are witnessed in all public houses to catch a recruit

Geneva Watches.

Watches, remarkable for their extreme thinness, are now manufactured at Geneva. They are not thicker than a line and the 16th of a line (little more then the 12th of an inch.) This change does not, however, militate against the full play of the movement, for that remains the same, the thinness being obtained by placing the hands at the side instead of over the works. This arrangement makes the watches rather larger in circumference.

A Good Memory.

A man in Providence was convicted of violating the license laws by selling liquors. One witness having sworn in one of these cases, that he took nothing to drink in the house on a Sunday morning before breakfast, was asked by the respondent's counsel, how he could fix the day. He replied that he had been there to take a drink on every Sunday morning before breakfast, for a considerable length of time!

The Madras, Nellore, and Arcot Railway.

There has been an accession, says the Colonial Gazette, of substantial and influential names to the directory of this Company. Its plans, too, have been extended and materially improved. They now comprehend—1st. A direct line from Madras to Nellore. 2d. A line to Cuddapah, nearly at right angles to the first, from Madras to Nellore. 2d. From Cuddapah to Arcot, on which there is a present amount of traffic to render the line amply remunerative. These are not only good lines in themselves, but will work well with those projected by a smaller Company, viz:—A coast line from Madras to Sadras and Pondicherry, with a branch (deflecting 20 miles from Pondicherry) to Arcot.—This system of railways, when completed, will amply accommodate a district with about 200 miles of coast line, and an extreme depth of about 100 miles into the interior. Madras is situated in the centre of the coast line. It is the metropolitan district of the Presidency, and one of the most fertile and best cultivated in it. The enterprise contrasts favorably with many of the Indian schemes afloat, from its comprehensive sphere of action and practicability. It is obviously a real scheme; one within the range of human capital and human life.

Good Story Teller.

Galt seemed to me to be by nature a male Scherezaide. He had the gift of narrative so rare, so fine, so seemly simple, but so inexplicably difficult: repartee is nothing to it; the power of relating a story without affectation or weariness to your listener, is one above all price. Women excel in it more than men—but then they are aided by the varying countenance, the soft voice, the quick apprehension of an auditor's feelings They are, it is true, apt to hurry; and hurry is fatal to a narrative. Coleridge had it—at his friend Mr. Gilman's, at Highgate, what heads were bowed down to listen to his half dissertations, half narratives, his eye mildly glistening all the while, his white hair falling about his neck, his accents thrilling in the ear of young and old, gay and grave. Moore has it, but in a very different mode: his stories are short and pithy, without the thoughtful moral of Coleridge, or the strong situation which Galt delighted to depict. For Galt was melodramatic in his tales; there was always a surprise—a mystery, an anomaly, at all events, at the end of them. He spoke in a low, monotonous voice, with much of the Greenock accent marring its sweetness, but adding to its effect; and he bent his high forehead down, and his eyes, long, narrow, and deep sunk, were fixed steadily upon those of him to whom he addressed himself, and he went on, stopping at intervals to catch an exclamation from his listener, and to return it with his own dry laugh. His narrative was simple, succinct, unambitious in phrase, and had the charm of seeming to be thoroughly enjoyed by him who spoke it, as it usually was by those to whom it was spoken.—Bentley's Miscellany.

Tax on Passengers.

The New York Journal of Commerce says: "The Supreme Court gave its decision on Tuesday upon the constitutional power of the State of New York to impose a tax on passengers arriving at its ports. The Court held that the State had the power, as a municipal regulation guarding against the expense of supporting paupers. The reasoning was that the State had a right to guard itself against the expense of pauper immigrants; and that it, instead of giving security to protect the State from that expense, ship owners preferred to commute and pay a certain sum down, that did not render the commutation money illegal."

Twenty-ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Correspondence of the American:
WASHINGTON Jan'y. 5, 1846.

SENATE.

Several private petitions were presented and appropriately referred.

Mr. Lewis, from the committee on Patents, reported a bill to renew a patent to James Bogardus.

Mr. Niles, from the Committee to which the subject had been referred, reported a joint resolution to regulate and reduce the price of the public printing.

Mr. Niles, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported a bill to establish mail routs in Texas.

The Senate, at half past 12 o'clock, adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

OREGON—REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Mr. C. J. Ingersoll reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs a Joint Resolution advising the President of the United States forthwith to give the notice to Great Britian that the treaty of the Convention of 1827 is abrogated and annulled.

Mr. Ingersoll moved to suspend the Rules in order to receive the Resolution, and, the vote being taken, there was but one dissenting voice.

The Resolution being brought before the House and read, Mr. Ingersoll moved that the Resolution be made the special order of the day for the first Monday in February.

Several members cried out "too long," "too long," "to-morrow," "now," &c.

Mr. Davis, of Ky., from the minority of the Committee, asked leave to present a minority Report from the Committee on Foreign Relations.—Leave was granted with some reluctance, and Mr. Davis read his report from the Clerk's table, declaring that the notice ought to be given by the treaty-making power, and that it belonged to the Executive and the Senate, as a part of the treaty-making power, to give the notice.

The Resolutions having been read a second time, Mr. Ingersoll moved anew to make it a special order for the 1st Monday in February.

Motions were made to strike out the 1st Monday in February, and insert "to-morrow. These the Speaker ruled to be out of order, and the debate commenced at once upon the motion to refer. Mr. Giddings, of Ohio, obtained the floor.

Mr. Giddings then launched forth at once into a speech still more peculiar than any one which had preceded it. The motion before the country, he said, was entirely different from what it was a year since. Important events had occurred since Congress was last in session. The balance of power had been changed from the Free to the Slave States, and he was for restoring the equality of power by adding the whole of Oregon to the Union. He preferred war with all its horrors to giving the balance of power to the Slave States.

Mr. Giddings went on to address the House at great length amidst many interruptions and calls to order. He alluded to the landing of troops in Slave States for the purpose of suppressing insurrection. He believed it would come, and when it did come he was for justice to the Slave.

Mr. Cabell of Florida called Mr. Giddings to order, but there were cries to give him a hearing, and Mr. Giddings went on to give his reasons for giving the notice, which were in substance an indisposition to submit to the circumstances.

Mr. Giddings appeared to change his mind as he progressed in his speech, and at last he thought that war would not come, for the President would back out. (Laughter.) He was however for the notice, and for the territory, and for making free States out of it in order to balance Texas.—Southern gentlemen had brought this policy upon us, and now let them feel the consequences of it. They were ready enough to bring Texas into the Union, and they may now take the consequences of adding Oregon, even if war would be the result. He saw Southern gentlemen busy and fearful upon the floor of the House, who were most valorous for Texas.

Mr. McDowell of Ohio continued the debate.—He gave an account of the gallant manner in which he and his friends had come to the rescue upon the Texas question, and called upon the South to act as valiantly for Oregon. He hoped that Southern gentlemen would not be intimidated by the idea that their country was to be overran by Blacks from the West Indies.

In regard to the Oregon question, our title was beyond all dispute. The Secretary of State had made that title so clear that no County Court lawyer would deny it. He was opposed to the offer which the Executive had made, and would resist it to the last. Mr. McDowell made an appeal upon this question to the resolutions of the Baltimore Convention, and what was there said of the Oregon question.

Mr. Rhett, of S. C., continued the debate, and fell upon the gentleman from Ohio, who, at the last session of Congress, had voted with him against giving the notice.

Mr. McDowell made some explanation, not heard, and Mr. Rhett went on to defend his position. He wished to know what was to be done, and what was to be the effect of giving the notice. War would be the inevitable result. Our institutions were based upon principles of right and justice. England has committed no outrage upon our honor and our rights. Were we not in as good, in an infinitely better position than England upon this question? She was losing power and we were gaining it every day in Oregon.

Mr. R. believed that when we got into a war with England, she would very soon come to the conclusion that, like the French Revolutionists, we were warring not for our rights, but against monarchical systems of Government. Before we entered upon such a system as this, it would become us to measure our strength with England—England powerful upon every sea and in both Continents. If we were for war, let us bide our time to begin it. Fifteen or twenty years hence we might make a struggle in defence of our institutions against all the world.

Mr. R. said he was not afraid of war, for no nation could ever become possessed of our soil, but it might be as difficult for us to conquer other nations, as it was for them to conquer us.

Mr. Rhett made some allusion to the new-born zeal for war measures in the House of Representatives. The gentleman from Massachusetts opposed the last war, though he is now anxious to lead us into another.

Mr. Adams rose with some excitement, and asked if the gentleman meant him.

Mr. Rhett,—"I do."

Mr. Adams. In 1809 I was selected by the then President of the United States as Minister to Russia, and I was selected in consequence of my support of Mr. Jefferson's measures against Great Britain. I did suppose that the gentleman knew better than what he has asserted. His zeal and anxiety to involve him (Mr. A.) in a difficulty, reminded him of the romance of Don Quixotte, where the Squire of the gallant Knight was represented as being lashed for his loved Dulcinia.

Mr. A. hoped the gentleman was not disposed to make war upon him for what others had done in Massachusetts. I have, said he, a most profound love for that State, but that I should be charged with the sins of others in Massachusetts, I must impute to the ignorance of the gentleman from South Carolina. To be charged first with voting against the war, and then with not supporting the war, he hoped he might say was rather to be imputed to the ignorance of the gentleman than to any malignant intention. (Applause.)

Mr. Rhett now resumed, and said that so young a politician as himself should be ignorant of all that had been done by the distinguished gentleman from Mass achusetts was not surprising; but during the nine years he had held a seat upon this floor, he had found the gentleman so constantly opposed to the South and Southern measures, that he thought he could not be wrong in placing him in opposition to the war.

In closing, Mr. Rhett alluded "to the political game which had been played upon this floor," according to other members. He believed, too, that there was a political game playing—a game to secure a Western President, a gambling game between men, as to what section of country, and what party should secure the next President.

Mr. Simms of Mo. argued that if we owned Oregon up to the 49° of north latitude, we owned up to 54, 40.

The most ultra and war-like speech of the day was made by Mr. Simms. He talked of war, bloody streams and clashing arms, like a man who loved fighting better than all the blessings and labors of peace,

Mr. Yancy obtained the floor at a late hour, and on his motion the House adjourned.

Anecdote of Mr. Legare.

The American Review for October contains an interesting biographical sketch of tha late Hugh S. Legare, of South Carolina, in which occurs the following anecdote illustrating his power as an advocate: "It was the case of Pell and Wife vs. the Executors of Ball. The circumstances of the case were these: A Miss Channing, daughter of Mr Walter Channing, (a merchant of Boston,) had married a Mr. Ball, of South Carolina, and carried him a large fortune, without any settlement. Mr. Ball by his last will and testament, bequeathed to his wife all of his fortune. Embarking at Charleston, for a visit to the north, on board the ill-fated steamboat Pulaski, which blew up at sea on the coast of North Carolina in 1835, they both perished in that awful catastrophe. The question in this case was, which survived the other? If Mrs. Ball, then the legacy vested in her, and was transmissable to her sisters; if her husband, then the legacy had elapsed, fell into the residue of the estate, and went to his family.

Mr. Legare was engaged on behalf of Mrs. Ball's sisters. On the one side, it was contended that the husband being the stronger, must have survived; and the doctrines of Civil Law on the subject of survivorship were relied on. Here, however, Legare was a master, and showed that all these presumptions must yield to positive testimony.—After the catastrophe, Mrs Ball was seen flying wildly about the wreck, her voice heard above others calling for her husband. Availing himself of this single but affecting fact—all that in the wild terror of such a scene could be known—Legare converted it by the tragic power of his eloquence into an irresistable proof that the tender husband, whose name the wife shrieked forth so distractedly, must have already perished. Upon the narrow theatre of that shattered deck, there was enacted a scene, he said, to paint which all that the imagination of poetry could invent of the most pathetic must fail. "She called upon the husband upon whom she had never called in vain—upon whose arm she had ever leaned in danger—her stay her rescue! She called, but he never answered no, sir, he was dead! he was dead!"

Mrs. Ball's sisters gained the suit, as also another point in the case which he argued—that the legacy was general and not specific."

Glorious Relics.

In what is called the "gold room" of Windsor Castle, in which all the "royal plate" is kept, is a service which was presented to William IV., by the merchants of Liverpool, for his support of the slave trade. This collection of plate is valued at twelve millions of dollars.

True.

The New York Tribune, in reply to some slur from one of the neutral papers, says: "We have tried our hand at both sorts of papers, and we give it as our most deliberate conviction, based on some ten or twelve years' experience, that the neutral press is not, and never can be as a general thing, so truly independent as the political press, and that its scope for free discussion and the utterance of unpalatable truth is far more contracted of the two. We go farther, and say with entire confidence that "the decencies of private life" have been as generally respected, and men quite as rarely 'blackened by every species of calumny' by the political as the neutral press.

As Good as I.

"Every man is as good as another, and a great deal better," says Marble in one of his plays—This sentiment prevails, we judge, to a considerable extent, as may also be inferred from the following:

One evening of last week, a rough, jovial son of Green Erin, with a somewhat bruised and bloody frontispiece, presented himself at the door of a gentleman, and handing him a paper, bluntly said—

"Here's something for ye."

It being too dark to read the contents of the document, the gentleman inquired from whom it came and its object,

"Why the fact is, me wife's jist dead, and we want to have a bit of a wake over her. Now I have got exactly a shillin': and Dr. ———, what lives round the corner, told me yon were a pretty good fellow, and would give me a lift in the way of a small contribution."

The gentleman was much amused by the off-hand manner of the applicant; but as a wealthy Irish gentleman lived in the adjoining house, he imagined the bereaved widower had made a mistake and called on the wrong person. He therefore told him that a wealthy countryman of his resided next door, who would most likely unloose his purse-strings in his behalf.

"Oh!" said the petitioner, "that don't make any difference; I'd as soon have something from you as from him. I'm not proud, and have no national prejudices. Give me any thing you please; I'll not be offended; for I think an American just as good as an Irishman."

We believe the unprejudiced gentleman succeeded in his object, and that his neighborhood resounded shortly after with the weeping and wailing of the bereaved.—New York Sunday Times.

☞ Last evening at dusk, there were six feet six inches water in the channel and at a stand.—We were informed that the river was choked up with a gorge above Elizabeth, for a distance of several miles, and that the river had rose from 10 to 15 feet at Brownsville.

☞ It will be seen, by reference to our "Imports by the River, that near 1600 kegs of lard arrived yesterday, and 3251 pieces of Bulk Pork—This is the first pork that has arrived for the year 1846.

☞ The steamer Medium left yesterday, for the wreck of the steamer R. Clayton, to save as much as possible before a rise in the river.

☞ The steamer Inda, bound from Cairo to New Orleans, sunk her flat-boat at Island 21, containing about three hundred sacks of corn.

☞ The St. Louis Republican of the 29th says: There is at last a fair prospect of a change in the weather. A south wind prevailed on Saturday and yesterday, and last night it was thawing rather than freezing. But it will take a week of sunshine, if unaccompanied by rain, to move the ice in the river, so fast and solid has it become. A rise of several feet is almost necessary to produce this result.

☞ The Wheeling Argus of the 7th says: A large frame past by here yesterday morning, in the ice, which was supposed, by those who saw it, to be the Cabin and upper works of the Richard Clayton.

☞ The N. O. Picayune, December 27th, says; The steamboats Bourbon and H. Kinney were damaged a few days ago in the Warrior river. The Kinney struck a snag, and was compelled to discharge her cargo. How the Bourbon was damaged is not stated. She reached Mobile on Wednesday in tow of the Native.

New Orleans Market.

The transactions in the Cotton market on Saturday were limited, owing to the expectation of the advices by the Acadia, which, allowing her fifteen days to Boston, are now fully due. The sales were about 1,100 bales, at full prices, holders in many instances requiring an advance upon previous rates.

Sugar.—The heavy transactions of Friday reduced the stock on sale materially, and the sales of the next day were on a small scale, not exceeding 300 hhds. Prices very firm.

Molasses continues in brisk demand, and is mostly taken on arrival. The current rate yesterday was 21½@21¾.

Provisions.—Pork—small sales of mess at $16; prime $14. We noticed a large sale of Lard from Levee, viz: 2,240 kegs and 600 bbls at 7¼c.

Flour.—A lot of 1,100 bbls Ohio was taken on Friday evening, after our report was closed, at $6,10. A lot of 917 bbls damaged Ohio brought $3,95 at Auction on Saturday.

Whiskey.—We notice sales comprising about 250 bbls. rectified at 27c.

☞ Upwards of 1200 Molasses barrels left on Wednesday, on the different boats for New Orleans.

BARGAINS IN CLOTH.—We have at the present the best selected and finest lot of Cloths ever offered on a Pittsburgh counter. The finest and most superb qualities of French, of such shades as are most highly approved of by the trade; super fine black; extra lustre olive; rich dark mulberry; fancy shaded brown; English do.; premium American olive and black; low price Belgias, &c. These Cloths have been bought late this Fall, we venture to assert, at better bargains than any brought out, and consequently we are enabled, and will sell COATS of any description, made and trimmed in a style unsurpassed by any house in this city, or elsewhere, at lower prices than the same goods can be put together under any circumstances. JOSIAH KING. J. FINNEY, JR.

KING & FINNEY, Agents at Pittsburgh for the Delaware Mutual Safety Insurance Co. of Philadelphia. Fire Risks upon buildings and merchandize of every description, and Marine Risks upon hulls or cargoes of vessels taken upon the most favorable terms.

☞ Office in the warehouse of King & Holmes, on Water street, near Market.

N. B. King & Finney invite the confidence and patronage of their friends and the community at large to the Delaware M. S. Insurance Company, as an institution among the most flourishing in Philadelphia—as having a large paid-in capital, which by the operation of its charter is constantly increasing—as yielding to each person insured his due share of the profits of the company, without involving him in any responsibility whatever, beyond the premium actually paid in by him, and therefore as possessing the Mutual principle divested of every obnoxious feature, and in its most attractive form.

THE GIRARD LIFE INSURANCE, ANNUITY AND TRUST COMPANY of Philadelphia. Chartered in 1836—Charter Perpetual;—Capital, $300,000—BENJAMIN W. RICHARDS, President:—Continues to make insurance on lives, grant annuities and endowments, and accept trusts from individuals, corporate bodies, and courts of justice, and execute them agreeably to the desire of the parties, and receive deposites of money in trust or on interest.

The Company add a bonus at stated periods to the insurance for life, and on the 20th of January last, an addition was made to all policies for life, remaining in force and issued prior to January 1st, 1842, amounting to 10 per cent. on the sum insured in policies issued in 1837, 7½ per cent. on policies issued in 1838, and in rateable proportions according to their respective dates.

The chief object of an insurance for life is to provide a sum of money at the death of the party insured, for the benefit of a widow, children, friends or creditors; and it will be seen on an examination of the table of rates of the life insurance, which will be furnished by the subscriber to all who may feel an interest in the subject, that by paying a small sum to the office every year during his life, a person may secure to his family a very considerable amount at his decease.

Wherever the system of Life Insurance is properly understood, it is extensively adopted, and its great advantages to all, but more especially to those who depend on their own exertions for the support of their families, or who may be desirous to secure the payment of a sum of money to their friends, creditors or children, at their decease, which they would be otherwise unable to accomplish, that the operation of the system needs but to be explained to ensure the serious consideration of the public.

In several instances it has happened that the party insured has died shortly after, having paid only one or two instalments of the premium, when his family have received from this office the full amount for which he had insured.

Full information on this important subject may be obtained by applying, personally, or by letter (post-paid) at the office of the subscriber, the authorised agent of the Girard Life Insurance Company.

Valuable Real Estate for Sale.

THE undersigned will dispose of the following valuable Real Estate, viz:—

THIRTY ACRES OF GROUND, having an extensive front on the South bank of the Monongahela, (our principal business river where all the steamers lie, and where the heavy business of the City is done,) being the West end of the Borough of Birmingham, laid out into 230 lots of 24 by 100 feet, for Residences, and 96 by 330 feet for Manufactories, fronting on 50 feet streets, and extending back to 20 feet alleys.

TEN ACRES similarly situated and laid out, adjoining the East end of Birmingham.

THIRTY ACRES OF COAL HILL LOTS, running from near the Bridge toward Birmingham, fronting on the two Turnpikes.

These are well known as the most advantageous locations about Pittsburgh, or in the world, for Manufacturing, inexhaustible mines of Coal of the richest and best quality, at hand, and furnished much cheaper than any other place about the City, and being nearly opposite the City Steamboat landing.

For Residences, also, there are no more beautiful, healthy, and convenient locations for those engaged in business in the City; but a few minutes ride or walk from the beautiful new Wire Suspension Bridge; some of the sites commanding fine views of the two Cities, three rivers and surrounding country.

We would prefer to selling, that Capitalists would join us in the erection of manufactories and other improvements. There is a stratum of Coal beneath the surface of 12 to 15 feet in thickness. A large body of the ground also is above the common level, and valuable for making Brick. If being a portion of an undivided estate for the past forty years, has thus been kept out of the market. Could the yearly applications to purchase have been accepted, it would long since have all been sold and contracted upon. It will be sold at less than other property as near the City in other directions, (and we particularly invite those interested to compare the prices,) notwithstanding its superior advantages, and mustrapidly increase in value beyond other property, as every one can see from its great resources and advantageous location, presenting an object of the most certain and lucrative investment; for manufacturing the most advantageous, and for residences the most desirable, all of which is more fully set forth and confirmed, as well as other general information in regard to it and our city, in a pamphlet issued by us, and to be had of Booksellers in this and Eastern cities. If not disposed of previously, it will be sold either in whole or in part of either one of the plots, on Monday, the 25th day of May next, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Terms moderate. O. ORMSBY GREGG,

Fits,	Colds,	Gout,	Gravel,
Itchings of the Skin,		Liver Complaint.	Nervous Complaints.

And a variety of other diseases arising from impurities of the blood, and obstructions in the organs of digestion.

Experience has proved that nearly every disease to which the human frame is subject originates from impurities of the Blood or Derangements of the Digestive Organs; and to secure Health we must remove those obstructions or restore blood to its natural state This important fact has long been familiar to the world; but our natural aversion to medicine in any shape has hitherto deterunined us, in many cases, to prefer the disease to its cure. Now, however, the objection is effectually removed by CLICKENER'S FURGATIVE PILLS, which being completely enveloped with a coating of pure white sugar (as distinct from the internal ingredients as a nut shell from the kernel) have no taste of medicine, but are as easily swallowed as bits of candy. Moreover they neither nauseate or gripe in the slightest degree. This is occasioned by the fact that they are compounded on scientific principles and based on an intimate acquaintance with the origin of disease and the actual structure of the human system, which enables them to operate equally on all the diseased parts of the system. Thus, for example, if the Liver be affected, one ingredient will operate on that particular organ, and by cleansing it of that excess of bile it is constantly discharging into the stomach, restore it to its natural state. Another will operate on the blood, and remove those impurities which have already entered into its circulation; while a third will effectually expel from the system those impurities which have been discharged into the stomach through the instrumentality of the other ingredients. Hence, they strike at the root of Disease, remove all impure humors (the principal cause of disease) from the body; open the pores externally and internally; promote the insensible perspiration; separate all foreign and obnoxious particles from the Chyle, ensure a free and healthy action to the heart, lungs and liver, and thereby restore health, even when every other means have failed.

The entire truth of the above can be ascertained by the trial of a single box; and their virtues are so positive and certain in restoring health that the proprietor binds himself to return the money paid for them in all cases where they do not give universal satisfaction.

PRICE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER BOX.

Dr. Wistar's Great Discovery!

IT was once said—"There is nothing new under the sun." This has been emphatically true in reference to medicine. Hundreds of pills, panaceas, expectorants and specifics, of all sorts, have been puffed into notoriety—all made of the same ingredients, adding no new materials to the "healing art." But Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, furnishes a new medical agent—a new principle evolved from nature's own depository. It cures Asthma, Incipient Consumption, Liver complaint, and all diseases of the Lungs, when nothing else will. An honorable member of the Canadian Parliament, writes that it has cured him of asthma of ten years' standing.

A. Williams, attorney at law, 58 William street, New York, has been cured of the same disease of twenty-four years' standing.

Mr. Cozens, of New Jersey, makes affidavit that it cured him of a supposed consumption, after his physicians had given him up to die; and so with hundreds of others.

☞ Remember we positively, in no case, palm off unreal cures produced by this invaluable remedy.

☞ Be sure to get Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry —there are imitations!

PITTSBURGH, December 5th, 1844.—Messrs. B. A. Fahnestock & Co.—Gentlemen: I had the misfortune, day before yesterday to have my left thumb caught in a windlass, by which it was severely mashed and bruised. The pain was intense, and the thumb was swelled almost to bursting. I could sleep none the night following from the agony I suffered. Yesterday I called at your store to see if I could procure any thing that would afford relief. Your young man recommended the Rubefacient, and gave me a bottle; I applied some immediately, and in about an hour afterwards, I obtained complete relief.—The swelling subsided, and the pain ceased entirely, and I slept undisturbed. My sleep last night was also sound and undisturbed. I still continue the use of it, and shall till the thumb recovers its former strength. I strongly recommend the Rubefacient as a valuable remedy for bruises MICHAEL TWABEY, Fifth street.

FROM FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED LOTS IN ALLEGHENY CITY, FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale, on accommodating terms, from fifty to one hundred lots in Allegheny city, the titles to which are indisputable. These lots are twenty four feet in front, running back from eighty to one hundred and forty feet, except the corner lots, which vary from one hundred to upwards of two hundred feet front. They are pleasantly situated in the First Ward, on the bank of the Ohio river, comprising the only portion of Allegheny City suitable for a good Steamboat, or Ferry landing, and are well calculated for residences, extensive Manufacturing establishments, or other purposes. The Omnibus from the bridge and the Stage for Beaver pass the property, daily, the former at short intervals, and Coal can be procured from the opposite side of the river, at all seasons of the year. Manufacturers can obtain the quantity of ground necessary, upon very reasonable terms, and will find it to possess peculiar advantages for such purposes. Mechanics, river men and others will find it an excellent location for the erection of dwellings. A plot of ground can be seen and further information obtained by calling upon the subscribers, on the premises.
